By Order,
M. N. KRISHNA RAO,
Financial Secretary to Government.

Rules for the grant of advances to Government Officers for subscribing to the Mysore Government Loans of 1921 announced in Notification No. Fl. 98—G. F. 6-21-4, dated 9th July 1921.

1. On payment in cash of a deposit of *4%—1½% of the face value of *7—6½% Bonds required, Government will make an advance of 96% to intending subscribers not exceeding six months' pay. The value of Bonds applied for under these rules should be a multiple of rupees 100.

2. Government will retain the Bonds subscribed for by the borrower pending complete repayment of the advance obtained by him.

3. The amount advanced will be repaid within two years by equal monthly instalments by deduction from pay.

4. If no pay or allowances is due to the officer in any month the instalment must be paid in cash.

5. Interest will be calculated at the rate of 6¼% per annum on the amount outstanding on the 1st of each month and charged half-yearly to the borrower. On the other hand the borrower will be credited with the full interest realised on bonds reserved for him.

6. Failure to pay any instalment will involve the charging of interest on the outstanding balance of advance at 8% per annum.

7. On complete repayment of the advance Government will transfer to the borrower the Bonds and also furnish him with a statement of the interest account.

8. Applications from officers desiring to subscribe under this scheme should be made in the form attached which must be forwarded to the Comptroller not later than 31st October 1921. The deduction from pay will commence from the first pay bill drawn after the application is tendered.

SCHEDULE.

TESTING.

(See section 3).

I.—Nature of the Test-apparatus.

The apparatus consists of the following parts:—

(1) the oil-cup;

(2) the cover, with slide, test-lamp, and clock work arrangement for opening and closing the holes in the cover and for dipping the test flame;

(3) the water-bath or heating vessel;

(4) the tripod stand with jacket and spirit-lamp for heating the water-bath;

(5) the thermometer for indicating the temparature of of the oil in the oil-cup;

(6) the thermometer for indicating the temparature of the water in the water-bath;

(7) the thermometer for indicating the temparature of the oil before it is poured into the oil-cup;

(8) the dropping bottle, or pipette for replenishing the test lamp; and

(9) a barometer standardised at the Meteorological Office of the State or at any other place appointed by the Government.

The oil-cup is cylindrical flat-bottomed vessel made of gun-metal or brass, and tinned or silvered inside. A gauge is fixed to the inside of the cup to regulate the height to which it is to be filled with the sample under examination.

The cup is provided with a close-fitting overlapping cover, which carries the thermometer, the test-lamp and the adjuncts thereto. The test-lamp is suspended upon two supports by means of trunnions, which allow it to be easily inclined to a particular angle and restored to its original position. The socket in the cover, which is to hold a round bulb thermometer for indicating the temperature of the oil during the testing operation, is so adjusted that the bulb of the latter is always inserted in a definite position below the surface of the liquid.

The cover is provided with three holes, one in the centre and two smaller ones close to the sides. These are closed and opened by means of a pivoted slide. When the slide is moved so as to uncover the holes, the suspended lamp is caught by a projection fixed on the slide, and tilted in such a way as to bring the end of spout just below the surface of the lid. As the slide moves back so as to cover the holes, the lamp returns to its original position. Upon the cover, in front of and in a line with the nozzle of the lamp, is fixed a white bead, the diameter of which represents the size of the test-flame to be used.

The water-bath or heating vessel is so constructed that, when the oil-cup is placed in position in it, an air-space or air-chamber intervenes between the two: consequently, in applying the test under ordinary circumstances, the heat is transmitted gradually to the oil from the hot water through the air space. The water-bath is fitted with a socket for receiving a long bulb thermometer, to indicate the temperature of the water. It is also provided with a funnel, an overflow-pipe and two handles.

The water-bath rests upon a tripod stand, which is fitted with a copper cylinder or jacket, so that the bath is surrounded by an enclosed air-space, which retains and regulates the heat. One of the legs of the stand serves as a support for a spirit-lamp, which is attached to it by a small swing bracket.

The clock work arrangement, by which during the operation of testing the slide is withdrawn, and the test-flame dipped into the cup and raised again as the slide is replaced, is provided with a ratchet key for setting it in action for each test, and with trigger for starting it each time that the test-flame is applied.

II.—Directions for drawing the sample and preparing it for testing.

1. Drawing the sample.—In all casess the testing officer or some person duly authorized by him shall personally superintend the drawing of the sample from an original unopened tin or other vessel.

An opening sufficiently large to admit of the oil being rapidly poured or syphoned from the tin or other vessel shall be made.

Two bottles, each of the capacity of about forty fluid ounces, are to be filled with the oil. One of these, the contents of which are intended to be preserved for reference in case of need, is to be carefully corked, the cork being well driven home, cut off level with the neck, and melted sealing-wax worked into it. The other bottle may be either stoppered or corked.

2. Preparing the sample for testing.—About ten fluid ounces of the oil, sufficient for three tests, are transferred from the bottle into which the sample has been drawn to a pint-flask or bottle, which is to be immersed in water artificially cooled until a thermometer, introduced into the oil, indicates a temperature not exceeding 50° Fahrenheit.

3. Samples of certain mixtures.—Samples of liquid, and viscous and sedimentary, petroleum mixtures shall be prepared for testing in the manner prescribed by the two foregoing directions.

III.—Directions for preparing and using the Test-apparatus.

1. Preparing the water-bath.—The water-bath is filled by pouring water into the funnel until it begins to flow out at the overflow-pipe. The temperature of the water at the commencement of each test, as indicated by the long bulb thermometer, is to be 130° Fahrenheit, and this is attained in the first instance by mixing hot and cold water, either in the bath or in a vessel from which the bath is filled, until the thermometer which is provided for testing the temperature of the water gives the proper indication; or the water is heated by means of the spirit-lamp (which is attached to the stand of the apparatus) until the required temperature is indicated.

2. Preparing the test-lamp.—The test-lamp is fitted with a piece of cylindrical wick of such thickness that it fills the wick-holder, but may readily be moved to and fro for the purpose of adjusting the size of the flame. In the body of the lamp, upon the wick, which is coiled within it, is placed a small tuft of cotton wool, moistened with petroleum, any oil not absorbed by the wool being removed. When the lamp has been lighted the wick is adjusted by means of a pair of forceps until the flame is of the size of the bead fixed on the cover of the oil-cup; should a particular test occupy so long a time that the flame begins to get smaller, through the supply of oil in the lamp becoming exhausted, three or four drops of petroleum are allowed to fall upon the tuft of wool in the lamp from the dropping bottle or pipe-tte provided for the purpose. This can be safely done without interrupting the test.

3. Filling the oil-cup.—The oil-cup having been previously cooled, by placing it bottom downwards in water at a temperature not exceeding 50° Fahrenheit, is to be rapidly wiped dry, placed on a level surface in a good light, and the oil to be tested is poured in very slowly, without splashing, until its surface is level with the point of the gauge which is fixed in the cup. The round bulb thermometer is inserted into the lid of the cup, care being taken that the projecting rim of the collar touches the edge of the socket; the test-lamp, prepared as already described, is placed in position, and the cover is then put on to the cup and pressed down so that its edge rests on the rim of the cup.

4. Application of the test.--The water-bath, with its thermometer in position, is placed in some locality where it is not exposed to currents of air, and where the light is sufficiently subdued to admit of the size of the entire test-flame being compared with that of the bead on the cover. The cup is carefully lifted without shaking it, and placed in the bath, the test-lamp is lighted, and the clockwork wound up by turning the key. The thermometer in the oil-cup is now watched, and, when the temperature has reached 56° Fohrenheit, the clockwork is set in motion by pressing the tigger.

If flash takes place, the clockwork is at once rewound and the tigger pressed at 57° Fahrenheit, and so on, at every degree rise of temperature, until the flash occurs, or until a temperature of 95° Fahrenheit has been reached.

If the flash takes place at any temperature below 77° Fahrenheit, the temperature at which it occurs is to be recorded. Two fresh portions of the sample are then to be successively tested in a similar manner and the results recorded. If no greater difference than 2° Fahrenheit exists between any two of the three recorded results, and if in no instance the flash has taken place within eight degrees of the temperature at which the testing is commenced, each result is to be corrected for atmospheric pressure as hereafter described, and the average of the three corrected results in the flashing point of the sample. In the event of there being a greater difference than 2° Fahrenheit between any two of the results, while in no instance has the flash taken place within eight degrees of the temperature at which the testing was commenced, the series of tests is to be rejected, and a fresh series of three similary obtained, and so on, until a sufficiently concordant series is furnished, when the results are to be corrected and the average taken in the manner already described.

If, however a flash has occurred at or below 64° when the test is applied in the manner above described, the next testing shall be commenced ten degrees lower than the temperature at which the flash had been previously obtained (that is to say, at 54° or thereunder), and this procedure shall be continued until the results of three consecutive tests do not show a greater difference than 2° and until a flash has not occurred in any of the three tests within eight degrees of the temperature at which the testing is commenced: Provided always that, if at the commencement of the series of tests a flash has occurred on the first application of the test flame at 56°, and if a flash has also occurred on the first application of the flame in each of three successive tests in which, thereupon, the test-flame is first applied at 46° as above directed, the testing officer shall certify that the petroleum has a flashing point below 47°, and the sample shall be reported dangerous.

If a temperature of 76° Fahrenheit has been reached without a flash occurring, the application of the test-flame is to be continued at every degree rise of temperature until a temperature of 95° Fahrenheit has been reached. If no flash has occurred up to this point, and if the petroleum is declared to be imported subject to the provisions of the Regulation, the tests shall not be continued, and the testing officer shall certify that the petroleum has a flashing point over 95° and is not dangerous. But, if the petroleum is oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes and is declared to have its flashing point at or above 200° or is oil to which a notification of the Government exempting it from the operation of the Regulation will be applicable in the event of the flashing point being found to be at or above 120°, the test shall be continued as follows:—The oil-cup is to be removed from the water-bath, and the temperature of the water in the water-bath is to be reduced to 95° Fahrenheit by pouring cold water into the funnel (the hot water escaping by the over-flow-pipe). The air-chamber is then to be filled to a depth of 1½ inches with water at a temperature of about 95° Fahrenheit, the oil-cup is to be replaced in the water-bath and the spirit-lamp attached to the water-bath is to be lighted and placed underneath. The test-flamed is then to be again applied, from 96° Fahrenheit, at every degree rise of temperature as indicated by the thermometer in the oil-cup until a flash takes place or until a temperature of 200° Fahrenheit, or 120° Fahrenheit, as the case may be, has been reached. If during this operation the test-flame appears to diminish in size, the lamp is to be replenished in the manner prescribed at 2 without interrupting the test.

If a flash occurs at any temperature between 76° and 200° Fahernheit the temperature at which it occurs, submit to correction for atmospheric pressure, is the flashing point of the sample.

In repeating a test a fresh sample of oil must always be used the tested sample being thrown away, and the cup must be wiped dry from any adhering oil and cooled, as already described, before receiving the fresh sample.

5. Correction for atmospheric pressure.—As the flashing point of an oil is influenced by changes in atmospheric pressure to an average extent of 1·6° Fahrenheit for every inch of the barometer, a correction of the observed flashing point may become necessary. The height of the barometer must therefore be determined at the time of making the test for the flashing point. The true height of the barometer for the purpose of the test shall be considered to be the height of the column of mercury measured at 32° Fahrenheit, which is supported by the air pressure at the time of the experiment; that is the actual height of the barometer at the time of observation duly corrected for any error of the instrument and for its temperature if necessary. For the purpose of applying the correction to the flashing point of the oil obtained by the test, a table is appended to this schedule giving the flashing points of oils ranging from 65° to 80° Fahrenheit, under pressure ranging from 27 to 31 inches of mercury.

The table is used in the following manner:—

Example.—An oil has given a flashing point of 71°, the barometer being at 28·6 inches; take the nearest number to 71° in the vertical column headed 28·6. This number is 70·8. Substitute for this the number in the same horizontal line in the column headed 30 (the normal height of the barometer). The substituted number, that is, the true flashing point of the oil, is 73°.

Directions for testing petroleum mixtures.

6. Liquid mixtures.—Where the petroleum mixture is wholly liquid, flows quite freely, and does not contain any sediment or thickening ingredient, such mixture is tested in the same manner as ordinary petroleum.

7. Viscous and sedimentary mixtures.—Where the petroleum mixture contains an undissolved sediment, as in the case of some metal polishes, which can be separated by filtration or by settlement and decantation, the sediment may be so separated and the decanted liquid may be tested in the same manner as ordinary petroleum.

In carrying out such separation, care must be taken to minimise the evaporation of the petroleum. The separation of the sediment must not be effected by distillation.

Where the petroleum mixture is such that sediment cannot be separated by the aforementioned means, or where it is of a viscous nature as in the case of India-rubber solution, quick drying paints, etc., such mixture shall be tested in a modified apparatus, whch differs from that prescribed in Part I only in the addition of a stirrer to equalize the temperature throughout the sample under test.

In carrying out the test of a viscous petroleum mixture, this stirrer shall be constantly revolved at a slow speed, except when applying the test flame, with the fingers, the direction of revolution being that of the hand of a clock.

With the exception of the use of the stirrer, the manner of carrying out the test shall be the same as in the case of ordinary petroleum.

The stirrer may be removed by grasping the spindle just above the blades with the finger and thumb, and unscrewing the upper sheath. The opening in the lid, through which the stirrer passes, may then be closed by a plug provided for the purpose.

When this has been done, the apparatus shall be deemed to comply with the specification set forth in this schedule and may be used for testing ordinary petroleum.

A model of the aforementioned apparatus will be deposited in the office of the Chemical Examiner to Government Bangalore and the provisions of section 19 of the Petroleum Regulation, in regard to verification and stamping shall apply also to such apparatus as thoub it were the apparatus prescribed by the said Regulation.

For the purpose of carrying out such verification the stirrer shall be removed and the opening plugged as hereinbefore directed. The apparatus shall then be tested with ordinary petroleum. The stirrer shall be verified by comparison of measurements.

IV.—Directions for determining the flashing point of petroleum and petroleum mixtures which are not fluid at ordinary temperatures but liquefy when heated in a water-bath, or which are liquid at ordindry temperatures but solidify on being cooled to 50° F.

1. Nature of the test-apparatus.—The instrument employed is the Abel-Pensky petroleum testing apparatus, fitted with an additional thermometer to indicate the temperature of the oil in close proximity to the walls of the cup. This thermometer has a cylindrical bulb, $\frac{7}{8}$ inch in length and $\frac{3}{16}$ inch in diameter. It is scaled from 45° to 165° Fahrenheit, ten degrees on the scale occupying $\frac{3}{8}$ inch. The thermometer is held vertically in a socket attached to the cover of the oil-cup in such a position that the bulb is $\frac{1}{10}$ inch from the side of the cup.

(The thermometer can be removed and the orifice which is provided for it closed by means of an india-rubber plug, if the apparatus is required for testing petroleum in the ordinary way.)

2. Directions for preparing the sample for testing.—About ten fluid ounces of the oil are placed in a pint-flask, the mouth of which is then closed with an india-rubber stopper and the sample is liquefied by placing the flask in a water-bath, the temperature of which is only raised sufficiently high to liquefy the oil.

3. Directions for preparing and using the test-apparatus.—The water-bath and test-lamp are to be prepared in the manner prescribed in Part III of this Schedule. The oil-cup is to be filled with the liquefied oil, and the cover (into which both thermometers are to be previously inserted) placed on it, care being taken that the bulb of the additional thermometer is not brought into contact with the bracket-gauge fixed inside the cup. The oil-cup is then to be placed in a refrigerator, or plunged up to the projecting collar in water maintained at sufficiently low temperature, until both thermometers indicate the temperature at which the testing of petroleum is directed in Part III of this Schedule to be commenced. The oil-cup is then to be removed, wiped dry and placed in the water-bath, and the testing effected in the manner prescribed in Part III of this Schedule, the temperature indicated by the additional (vertical) thermometer alone being noted, and the average of three determinations, duly corrected for atmospheric pressure, being recorded as the flashing point of the sample, provided that no greater difference than 4° Fahrenheit exists between any two of such results.

STATEMENTS OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The use of petroleum and its products is rapidly increasing and the interests of public safety require that the import, possession and transport of the same should be permitted only under proper safeguards. The Mysore Explosives Regulation, II of 1888, being found inadequate for the purpose, it is proposed to enact a special Regulation for enforcing the necessary precautionary measures as in British India. The annexed Bill is accordingly prepared on the lines of the Indian Petroleum Act (VIII of 1899) with suitable alterations to adapt its provisions to the conditions of Mysore,

This involves considerable inconvenience to the Press and expense to Government. All matter intended for publication in Parts II, III, IV, V and VI should therefore reach this office not later than Tuesday noon, and that for Part I not later than the forenoon of Wednesday, for the following Thursday's issue of the Gazette.

2. Spare copies of notifications, etc., are often asked for long after their publication, when the matter has been broken up, necessitating its resetting and thereby causing inconvenience to the Press and waste of money. When spare copies are wanted, a note to that effect, stating the number of copies, should be made at foot of such manuscript. If spare copies exceeding 100 in number are required, the department concerned should supply the required quantity of paper.

3. Matter sent for insertion in the Gazette will be published only once.

4. Applications for the supply of the Gazette on Public Service should be made to the Chief Secretary to the Government of Mysore.

5. The English or the Kanarese portion of the Mysore Gazette, consisting of Parts I, I-A, II, III and V only, will be supplied to the Members of the Representative Assembly during their tenure of office as such Members, Shanbhogs, Patels, Nad Gaudas and Shanbhogs within the State at half rates on production of a certificate from the Amildar of the taluk to the effect that such applicant is bona fide on duty at the time. Such subscribers will please note that the Gazette cannot be had in separate Parts at concessional rates. Those who pay Rs. 2-0 per annum will have Parts I, I-A, II, III and V only and those who require the other Parts will have to pay the full subscription fixed for the Part or Parts wanted; but those who pay Rs. 4 will get the entire copy of the Gazette.

6. As Government Treasuries in Mysore are not allowed to receive and credit Gazette subscriptions as well as publication charges certified by Courts or private parties, all such moneys should be sent to Treasuries and only Treasury receipts forwarded to this office. No money orders or cash will be received by the undersigned except from parties outside the State.

7. Much inconvenience is caused to this office by subscribers omitting to give their full and correct addresses and writing illegibly on the money order coupons. They are requested to insert invariably the name of the Post Office to which the copy should be sent.

8. Communications on post cards or on paper less than quarter sheet of foolscap, will not receive attention. No communications should be addressed to Government Service by private parties.

9. An efficient system of check is maintained over the despatch of Gazette copies forwarded through post. Duplicates cannot be supplied in any case of non-delivery.

10. Complaints regarding non-receipt of the Gazette should be forwarded to the undersigned within a week after the date on which [illegible]
